Building in Mexico

These construction pictures show the future home of Art and Maritza Almanza. They contracted with Edo and Martin, of Fine Fleur, whom I have been recommending to my readers since 2004. For more information on Fine Fleur, download my Free Real Estate report at <http://www.retireinluxury.com/realestate.html>

Art & Maritza

Many people ask me if I'm a real estate agent. The fact of the matter is I'm not...never have been. Although, I did take the Real Estate course - years ago.

Because of that, I feel I can offer you truly objective information about building or buying a home in Mexico.

Dick and I know a few things about building and remodeling. We always have a project going on... like our guest bathroom currently in progress!!

We basically put our boys through school by "redoing" homes. Dick and I both know which end of the hammer to use, and yes, I do have my own tool box - of course, all the handles have been painted pink :) Two reasons for that - I like them pink, and the boys always refused to use "Mom's pink tools"! So I always knew where they were!

Solid brick construction

Here's what Art & Maritza have to say...

"From the first moment we landed in beautiful Mazatlán, we immediately felt welcome and so much at home."

This warm feeling was reinforced when we met with the friendly people of Fine Fleur who picked us up from the airport. Throughout our stay Edo and Martijn Mark, and their staff, provided us with superb service.

Efficient cistern

During the planning stages for our trip to Mazatlan, we were very hopeful and excited, but we must admit, we were also a little skeptical because a lot of the information about location, quality and price just sounded too good to be true. But, happily, we can now confirm that everything that was promised to us was completely true. The integrity, friendliness, thoughtfulness, and extreme competence has earned the people at Fine Fleur, our utmost confidence.

We found the staff at Fine Fleur and their associates to be very professional in the way they handle business. As you know, some paperwork and documents are required when buying real estate in Mexico, and we were a little nervous about how to arrange all of that. Well, we should not have worried, because while we were on the beach, relaxing and having fun, Fine Fleur arranged all the paperwork. That's just part of their excellent, thorough service.

Detail of brick work

It turned out to be very simple to buy a house with Fine Fleur! We choose the house plans we wanted, told them what changes we wanted made, decided what extras we wanted to include, picked the location, and Edo and Martijn and their staff took care of the rest!

We returned to the U.S. and now we are being updated on a monthly basis through a special web link, set up for every client, so that we can constantly see the progress of the construction.

We are so very happy and we feel very lucky that we found Fine Fleur for our Mexico home purchase. (Email received by Barbie, May 2006: ..."it was through your website - www.retireinluxury.com, Barbie, that I was first contacted by Edo. Thank you!") Fine Fleur's service exceeded all our expectations.

We know that one should always be careful with whom you do business when investing in another country especially, and we feel it was a huge advantage that the management of Fine Fleur is European. They think, feel and act the same way as we Americans do and because of that, we had excellent communication with them.

Items we worried about, were most of the time already solved by Fine Fleur before we even asked about it. All in all we are very satisfied with the services of Fine Fleur and we can sincerely recommend Fine Fleur to everyone!

The Almanza's new home will be completed soon thanks to Fine Fleur's attention to quality, detail, and the fact that Edo and Martijn and their staff understand that everyone likes to be spoiled with great service. Now you know just why I have recommended Martin and Edo (the owners of Fine Fleur) to my readers who have been looking for their dream home in Mexico.
